My Vision Board

A private tool for parents going through separation or co-parenting decisions.

This board is for your own use. It isn't an assessment of you or your co-parent, it isn't a report, and it isn't meant for court. Nobody else needs to see it unless you choose to share it.

Take your time. There are no right or wrong answers. Come back to it whenever a decision feels heavy.

> If you feel unsafe, or you're worried about your child's safety right now, please don't rely on this board. Call 911 in an emergency. For support and safety planning, contact the National Domestic Violence Hotline at 1-800-799-7233.

How to use this board

What a card is. Each card is one section of the board. It has a single question and space to write. You can print the cards separately, or print them as one double-sided page.

Making the vision board (front)

- Start at the center. Type your child's name or nickname in the middle of the page. Everything else on the front connects back to them.
- Choose colors and images that make you think of your child. Don't worry about making it look polished. Pick what feels like them.
- Use Cards 1 to 4 to build the front. These questions help you decide what goes around the center: their good day, what helps them feel safe, and what you want them to remember.
- Place each image or color near the question it answers. Add one line beside it about why it matters to you.

Using the decision-making guide (back)

- Turn the page over. Use your answers from Cards 5 to 7 to fill in the three things you want to make sure you consider.
- Keep the board where you'll see it when a decision is hard.

Front of the board

1 Center of the board

My child's name or nickname:

Choose 3 to 5 images, symbols, or colors that represent your child. For each one, write one line about why it matters to you.

WHAT I CHOSE	WHY IT MATTERS TO ME

2 A good day

Picture an ordinary good day for your child. What's happening? Who's there? How do they feel?

3 What helps them feel safe

What does your child enjoy? What routines, people, places, or words help them feel steady?

4 What I want them to remember

When your child is grown, what do you hope they'll remember about growing up?

Back of the board

5 What we each bring

What do I contribute as a parent?

What does my co-parent contribute as a parent?

6 My commitment

What is one thing I will do to support my child's relationship with their other parent, even when it's hard?

7 For me

What do I want to stay steady on when things get hard?

What do I want to be true when this process is over?

What is one value I will not trade away to win a point?

Decision-making guide

When I'm making a decision, three things that I want to make sure I consider are:
